

TRA

6. A retinue; a number of followers or attendants.
My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That in the most exact regard support
The worships of their names. Shakespeare.
Our fire walks forth, without more train
Accompany'd than with his own complete Perfections. Milton's Par. Lost, b. v.
Thou should'st be seen
A goddess among gods, ador'd, and serv'd
By angels numberless, thy daily train. Milton's Par. Lost.
Fairest of stars, last in the train of night,
If better thou belong not to the dawn. Milton's Par. Lost.
He comes not with a train to move our fear. Dryden.
The king's daughter, with a lovely train
Of fellow nymphs, was sporting on the plain. Addison.
He would put a check to the fury of war, that a stop might be put to those fins which are of its train. Smalridge.
7. An orderly company; a procession.
Who the knights in green, and what the train
Of ladies dress'd with daisies on the plain? Dryden.
8. The line of powder reaching to the mine.
Since first they fail'd in their designs,
To take in heav'n by springing mines;
And with unanswerable barrels
Of gun-powder, dispute their quarrels;
Now take a course more practicable,
By laying trains to fire the rable. Hudibras, p. iii.
Shall he that gives fire to the train pretend to wash his hands of the hurt that's done by the playing of the mine!
L'Estrange's Fables.
9. TRAIN of artillery. Cannons accompanying an army.
With an army abundantly supplied with a train of artillery, and all other provisions necessary, the king advanced towards Scotland. Clarendon, b. ii.
TRAINBANDS. n. f. [train and band]. I suppose for trained band. The militia; the part of a community trained to martial exercise.
He directed the trainbands of Westminster and Middlesex, which consisted of the most substantial householders, to attend. Clarendon.
Give commission
To some bold man, whose loyalty you trust,
And let him raise the trainbands of the city. Dryden.
A council of war was called, wherein we agreed to retreat: but before we could give the word, the trainbands, taking advantage of our delay, fled first. Addison's Freeholder.
TRAINOIL. n. f. [train and oil]. Oil drawn by coction from the fat of the whale.
TRAINY. adj. [from train]. Belonging to train oil. A bad word.
Here steams ascend.
Where the huge hogheads sweat with trainy oil. Gay.
10. TRAINSE. v. a. [A low word, I believe, without any etymology.] To walk in a careless or sluttish manner.
Two slipshod muses trainse along, Pope.
In lofty madness, meditating song.
TRAIT. n. f. [trait, Fr.] A stroke; a touch. Scarce English.
By this single trait Homer marks an essential difference between the Iliad and Odyssey; that in the former the people perished by the folly of their kings; in this by their own folly. Broome's Notes on the Odyssey.
TRAITOR. n. f. [traitor, Fr. traditor, Lat.] One who being trusted betrays.
The law laid that grievous punishment upon traitors, to forfeit all their lands to the prince, that men might be terrified from committing treasons. Spenser on Ireland.
If you flatter him, you are a great traitor to him. Bacon.
I'll put him thus far into the plot, that he should be secured as a traitor; but when I am out of reach, he shall be released. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
There is no difference, in point of morality, whether a man calls me traitor in one word, or says I am one hired to betray my religion and sell my country. Swift.
TRAITORLY. adj. [from traitor]. Treacherous; perfidious.
These traitorly rascals miseries are to be smil'd at, their offences being so capital. Shakespeare, Winter's Tale.
TRAITROUS. adj. [from traitor]. Treacherous; perfidious; faithless.
What news with him, that trait'rous wight? Daniel.
Pontinus knows not you,
While you stand out upon these trait'rous terms. B. Johnson.
The traitorous or treacherous, who have misled others, he would have severely punished, and the neutrals noted. Bacon.
More of his majesty's friends have lost their lives in this rebellion than of his traitorous subjects. Addison's Freeholder.
TRAITROUSLY. adv. [from traitous]. In a manner suiting traitors; perfidiously; treacherously.
Good duke Humphry traitously is murder'd
By Suffolk. Shakespeare, Henry VI.
Thou bitter sweet! whom I had laid
Next me, me traitously hast betray'd;
And unsuspected half invisibly
At once fled into him, and stay'd with me. Donne.

TRA

- They had traitorously endeavoured to subvert the fundamental laws, deprive the king of his regal power, and to place on his subjects a tyrannical power. Clarendon.
TRAITRESS. n. f. [from traitor]. A woman who betrays.
I, what I am, by what I was, overcome;
Traitress, restore my beauty and my charms;
Nor steal my conquest with my proper arms. Dryden.
Nor did my traitress wife these eye-lids close,
Nor decently in death my limbs compose. Pope's Odyssey.
By the dire fury of a trait wife,
Ends the sad evening of a stormy life. Pope's Odyssey.
TRALATI'IOUS. adj. [from translatius, Lat.] Metaphorical; not literal.
TRALATI'IOUSLY. adv. [from tralati'ious]. Metaphorically; not literally; not according to the first intention of the word.
Language properly is that of the tongue directed to the ear by speaking; written language is tralati'iously so called, because it is made to represent to the eye the same words which are pronounced. Holder's Elements of Speech.
TO TRALI'NEATE. v. n. [trans and line]. To deviate from any direction.
If you tralineate from your father's mind,
What are you else but of a bastard kind?
Do, as your progenitors have done,
And by their virtues prove yourself their son. Dryden.
TRAMMEL. n. f. [trammel, Fr. trama, tragula, Lat.]
1. A net in which birds or fish are caught.
The trammel differeth not much from the shape of the bunt, and serveth to such use as the wear and haking. Carew.
2. Any kind of net.
Her golden locks she roundly did uptry
In braided trammels, that no looser hairs
Did out of order stray about her dainty ears. Fairy Qu.
3. A kind of shackles in which horses are taught to pace.
I may go shufflingly at first, for I was never before walked in trammels; yet I shall drudge at canter, till I have worn off the hitching in my pace. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
TO TRAMMEL. v. a. [from the noun]. To catch; to intercept.
If th' assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With its surecane fucces. Shakespeare, Macbeth.
TO TRAMPLE. v. a. [trampe, Danish]. To tread under foot with pride, contempt, or elevation.
Cast not your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet. Milton.
My strength shall trample thee as mire. Milton.
TO TRAMPLE. v. n.
1. To tread in contempt.
Diogenes trampled on Plato's pride with greater of his own. Government of the Tongue.
Your country's gods I scorn,
And trample on their ignominious altars. Rever.
2. To tread quick and loudly.
I hear his thundering voice resound,
And trampling feet that shake the solid ground. Dryden.
TRAMPLER. n. f. [from trample]. One that tramples.
TRANAMTION. n. f. [trans, Latin]. The act of swimming over.
TRANSE. n. f. [trans, Fr. transitus, Lat.] It might therefore be written trans. An ecstasy; a state in which the soul is rapt into visions of future or distant things; a temporary absence of the soul from the body.
Gynecia had been in such a trans of musing, that Zelmane was fighting with the lion before she knew of any lion's coming. Sidney, b. i.
Rapt with joy resembling heavenly madness,
My soul was ravish'd quite as in a trans. Spenser's Sonnet.
Abstract as in a trans methought I saw. Milton.
Sudden he starts,
Shook from his tender trans. Thomson's Spring.
TRANSED. adj. [from trans]. Lying in a trans or ecstasy.
His grief grew puffed, and the strings of life
Began to crack. Twice then the trumpets found,
And there I left him *trans*d. Shakespeare, King Lear.
TRANGRAM. n. f. [A cant word.] An odd intricately contrived thing.
What's the meaning of all these transgrams and gimcracks?
what are you going about, jumping over my master's hedges, and running your lines cross his grounds? Arbutnot.
TRANNNEL. n. f. A sharp pin.
With a small trammel of iron, or a large nail grounded to a sharp point, they mark the brick. Moxon's Mach. Exerc.
TRANQUIL. adj. [tranquille, Fr. tranquillus, Latin.] Quiet; peaceful; undisturbed.
I had been happy
So I had nothing known. Oh now, for ever Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content! Shakespeare.
TRANQUILLITY. n. f. [tranquillitas, Latin; tranquillitas, Fr.] Quiet; peace of mind; peace of condition; freedom from perturbation. 8 Leave

TRA

- Leave off.
To let a weary wretch from her due rest,
And trouble dying souls tranquillity. Fairy Qu. b. ii.
You can scarce imagine any hero passing from one stage of life to another with so much tranquillity, so easy a transition, and so laudable a behaviour. Pope.
TO TRANSCT. v. a. [transactus, Lat.]
1. To manage; to negotiate; to conduct a treaty or affairs.
2. To perform; to do; to carry on.
It cannot be expected they should mention particulars which were transacted amongst some few of the disciples only, as the transfiguration and the agony. Addison.
TRANSACTION. n. f. [transactio, Fr. from transact]. Negotiation; dealing between man and man; management; affairs; things managed.
It is not the purpose of this discourse to set down the particular transactions of this treaty. Clarendon, b. viii.
TRANSIMMATION. n. f. [trans and anima]. Conveyance of the soul from one body to another.
If the transmigration of Pythagoras were true, that the souls of men transmigrating into species answering their former natures, some men cannot escape that very brood whose fire Satan entered. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. vii.
TO TRANSCEND. v. a. [transcendere, Latin].
1. To pass; to overpass.
It is a dangerous opinion to such popes, as shall transcend their limits and become tyrannical. Bacon.
To judge herself, she must herself transcend,
As greater circles comprehend the less. Davies.
2. To surpass; to outgo; to exceed; to excel.
This glorious piece transcends what he could think;
So much his blood is nobler than his ink. Waller.
These are they Deserve their greatness and unenvy'd stand,
Since what they act transcends what they command. Denb.
High though her wit, yet humble was her mind,
As if she cou'd not, or she wou'd not find,
How much her worth transcended all her kind. Dryden.
3. To surmount; to rise above.
Make disquisition whether these unusual lights be meteorological impressions not transcending the upper region, or whether to be ranked among celestial bodies. Howell.
TO TRANSCEND. v. n. To climb. Not in use.
To conclude, because things do not easily sink, they do not drown at all, the fallacy is a frequent addition in human expressions, which often give distinct accounts of proximity, and transcend from one unto another. Brown.
TRANSCENDENCE. n. f. [from transcend].
TRANSCENDENCY. n. f. [from transcend].
1. Excellence; unusual excellence; supereminence.
2. Exaggeration; elevation beyond truth.
It is true greatness to have in one the frailty of a man, and the security of a God: this would have done better in poetry, where transcendencies are more allowed. Bacon's Essays.
TRANSCENDENT. adj. [transcendens, Lat. transcendent, Fr.]
Excellent; supremely excellent; passing others.
Thou, whose strong hand, with so transcendent worth,
Holds high the rein of fair Parthenope. Crafshaw.
There is, in a lawgiver, a habitual and ultimate intention of a more excellent and transcendent nature. Bishop Sanderfon.
If thou best he—But O! how fal'n, how chang'd
From him who in the happy realms of light,
Cloath'd with transcendent brightness, didst outline
Myriads, though bright. Milton.
Oh charming prince! Oh transcendent maid! A. Phillips.
The right our Creator has to our obedience is of so high and transcendent a nature, that it can suffer no competition; his commands must have the first and governing influence on all our actions. Rogers's Sermons.
TRANSCENDENTAL. adj. [transcendentalis, low Lat.]
1. General; pervading many particulars.
2. Supereminent; passing others.
Though the Deity perceiveth not pleasure nor pain, as we do; yet he must have a perfect and transcendental perception of these, and of all other things. Grew's Cosmol. b. ii.
TRANSCENDENTLY. adv. [from transcendent]. Excellently; supereminently.
The law of Christianity is eminently and transcendently called the word of truth. Saule's Sermons.
TO TRANSCOLATE. v. a. [trans and colo, Latin]. To strain through a sieve or colander.
The lungs are, unless pervious like a sponge, unfit to imbibe and transcolate the air. Harvey.
TO TRANSCRIBE. v. a. [transcribo, Lat. transcribere, Fr.] To copy; to write from an exemplar.
He was the original of all those inventions from which others did but transcribe copies. Clarendon.
The most rigid exactors of mere outward purity do but transcribe the folly of him who pumps very laboriously in a ship, yet neglects to stop the leak. Decay of Piety.

TRA

- If we imitate their repentance as we transcribe their faults;
we shall be received with the same mercy. Rogers.
TRANSCRIBER. n. f. [from transcribe]. A copier; one who writes from a copy.
A coin is in no danger of having its characters altered by copiers and transcribers. Addison.
TRANSCRIPT. n. f. [transcript, Fr. transcriptum, Latin.] A copy; any thing written from an original.
The Grecian learning was but a transcript of the Chaldean and Egyptian; and the Roman of the Grecian. Glanville.
The decalogue of Moses was but a transcript, not an original. Saule's Sermons.
Dictate, O mighty Judge! what thou hast seen
Of cities and of courts, of books and men,
And deign to let thy servant hold the pen.
Through ages thus I may presume to live,
And from the transcripts of thy prose receive
What my own short-liv'd verse can never give. Prior.
TRANSCRIPTION. n. f. [transcription, Fr. from transcriptus, Lat.] The act of copying.
The ancients were but men; the practice of transcription in our days was no monster in their's: plagiary had not its nativity with printing, but began in times when thefts were difficult. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. i.
The corruptions that have crept into it by many transcriptions was the cause of so great difference. Brewer's.
TRANSCRIPTIVELY. adv. [from transcript]. In manner of a copy.
Not a few transcriptively subscribing their names to other mens endeavours, transcribe all they have written. Brown.
TO TRANSCUR. v. n. [transcurro, Lat.] To run or rove to and fro.
By fixing the mind on one object, it doth not spate and transcur. Bacon.
TRANSCURSION. n. f. [from transcurro, Lat.] Ramble; pal-sage through; passage beyond certain limits; extraordinary deviation.
In a great whale, the sense and the affects of any one part of the body instantly make a transcurson throughout the whole. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
I have briefly run over transcursons, as if my pen had been posting with them. Watson's Life of Buckingham.
His philosophy gives them transcursons beyond the vortex we breathe in, and leads them through others which are only known in an hypothesis. Glanville's Secp.
I am to make often transcursons into the neighbouring forests as I pass along. Howell.
If man were out of the world, who were then left to view the face of heaven, to wonder at the transcurson of comets.
More's Antidote against Atheism.
TRANSE. n. f. [trans, Fr. See TRANCE]. A temporary absence of the soul; an ecstasy.
Abstract as in a trans, methought I saw,
Though sleeping, where I lay, and saw the shape
Still glorious before whom awake I stood. Milton.
TRANSELEMENTATION. n. f. [trans and element]. Change of one element into another.
Rain we allow; but if they suppose any other transelementation, it neither agrees with Moses's philosophy, nor Saint Peter's. Burton's Theory of the Earth.
TRANSEXION. n. f. [trans and sexus, Lat.] Change from one sex to another.
It much impeacheth the iterated transexion of hares, if that be true which some physicians affirm, that transmutation of sexes was only so in opinion, and that those transfigured persons were really men at first. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
TO TRANSFER. v. a. [transferre, Fr. transfere, Lat.]
1. To convey, or make over, from one to another.
He that transfers the laws of the Lacedemonians to the people of Athens, should find a great absurdity and inconvenience. Spenser's State of Ireland.
Was't not enough you took my crown away,
But cruelly you must my love betray?
I was well pleas'd to have transferr'd my right,
And better chang'd your claim of lawless might. Dryden.
The king,
Who from himself all envy would remove,
Left both to be determin'd by the laws,
And to the Grecian chiefs transferr'd the cause. Dryden.
This was one perverse effect of their sitting at ease under their vines and fig-trees, that they forget from whence that ease came, and transferred all the honour of it upon themselves. Atterbury's Sermons.
Your sacred aid religious monarchs own;
When first they merit, then ascend the throne:
But tyrants dread you, lest your just decree
Transfer the power and set the people free. Prior.
By reading we learn not only the actions and the sentiments of distant nations, but transfer to ourselves the knowledge and improvements of the most learned men. Watts.
